Preface

This is the Electoral Commission's second report on campaign spending by political parties and registered third parties during a UK Parliamentary general election,¹ and we are pleased to report real progress.

There were no major failures by the parties to comply with the law, and there has been a clear improvement both in their understanding of their responsibilities under the Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act 2000, and in the quality of information provided to the Commission.

This was also the first general election at which we have reported on candidates' compliance with spending rules, a new responsibility for the Commission that came into effect on 1 July 2001. It is therefore particularly encouraging that we received returns from 99% of candidates who contested the election.

Of course, there is more still to do. We have identified a number of areas for improvement, and we are working closely with the parties and others to further improve their understanding of the rules. For instance, late submission of returns remains an issue.

For our part, the Commission will continue to strengthen the guidance and advice that we provide to support the parties in meeting their obligations and so build on the already high levels of transparency in election spending.

Confidence in the integrity of the political process is essential to the health of our democracy. We hope that this report will contribute to such confidence and so encourage greater participation.

Sam Younger
Chairman

Executive summary

This report is the fifth in a series of reports and papers produced by the Electoral Commission on the 2005 UK Parliamentary general election. It focuses particularly on the campaign expenditure incurred by political parties, third parties and individual candidates.

This is the Commission's second report on campaign spending by registered political parties and third parties during a general election. It was the first time the general election regulated period for political parties and third parties overlapped with another regulated period; political parties and third parties who had also campaigned during the 2004 European Parliamentary election were required to submit a combined expenditure return covering both elections.

This is the first time we have reported at a general election on candidates' compliance with spending rules, as our role in monitoring candidates' compliance with the law came into effect after the 2001 general election, on 1 July 2001.

Spending by political parties

The 2005 election was the second general election in which parties had to comply with the regulatory framework introduced by the Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act 2000 (PPERA).

Across the UK 373 political parties were registered with the Commission in time to contest the 2005 general election, and 119 of those parties fielded candidates at the election, the largest number since PERA was introduced. Forty parties incurred campaign expenditure during the regulated period for the election.

Political parties spent over £42 million across the UK. During the 2005 election, parties spent over £35 million in England, £3.7 million in Scotland, £2.3 million in Wales and over £0.5 million in Northern Ireland.

All parties spent within their spending limit.

Eight parties contested seats across Great Britain, spending a total of almost £41 million on campaigning, which represented 98% of the total spend in Great Britain.

Of the total campaign spending across the UK, 97% was incurred by parties that won seats at the election. The Labour and Conservative parties alone accounted for 84% of the total spending in the UK.

Third party spending

At the time of the election, 26 recognised third parties were registered with the Commission, a significant increase from 2001, when there were 10 registered third parties.

The Commission received controlled expenditure returns from 25 third parties (including one return that reported nil expenditure), the largest number at an election since PPERA was introduced. Eighteen third parties submitted returns for the first time.

Third parties spent £1.7 million across the UK during the 2005 general election. No third party came close to their spending limit.

The vast majority of third party spending – £1.5 million or 89% – was reported in England. Third parties spent £143,000 in Scotland; £41,000 in Wales; and £3,000 in Northern Ireland.

UNISON and Conservative Rural Action Group together accounted for 72% of total expenditure, spending £1.2 million during the 2005 general election.

Spending by candidates

A total of 3,554 candidates stood in 646 constituencies at the 2005 general election. The Commission received returns from 3,504 candidates (99%).

Candidates spent just over £14.1 million in total, compared to £11.9 million at the 1997 general election. The average amount spent by candidates was just under £4,000.

Almost 40% of all candidates spent less than two-fifths of their statutory limit, with only 15% spending over four-fifths of their limit. Elected candidates spent on average more than unsuccessful candidates; more than half of elected candidates spent over four-fifths of their statutory limit.

Conclusions

In general, we have found an improved level of understanding of the PPERA reporting requirements among political parties and third parties that had previously contested elections. The quality of their statutory returns has steadily improved since 2001, with fewer breaches of the legislation being identified during the Commission's review of the returns. Individual candidates also appear to have an improved understanding of their responsibilities, as demonstrated by the higher levels of compliance than in previous elections.

Nevertheless, a number of issues of compliance with the law need to be addressed, particularly among parties contesting elections for the first time. These issues included late submission of returns, confusion about the reporting requirements and incomplete returns, which the Commission will address through improved guidance and advice.

1 Introduction

This is the final report in the series produced by the Electoral Commission on the conduct of the 2005 general election. This report provides details about the spending by political parties, third parties and candidates at the election.

The Electoral Commission and election reporting

1.1 The Electoral Commission is a UK-wide body established on 30 November 2000 under the Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act 2000 (PPERA). The Commission is independent of Government, non-partisan and directly accountable to the UK Parliament. The Commission is headed by a Chairman and four other Commissioners, none of whom have connections with any political party.

1.2 The Commission's mission is to foster public confidence and participation in the democratic process in the UK. We aim to promote integrity, involvement and effectiveness in the democratic process.

1.3 We are responsible for overseeing a number of aspects of electoral law, including the registering of political parties and third parties, monitoring and publishing significant donations to parties, and regulating spending by parties on election campaigns. In addition, we have a role in advising those involved on the conduct of elections and referendums, promoting public awareness of our electoral systems and reviewing electoral boundaries. Unlike many other electoral commissions around the world, we do not have responsibility for administering electoral registration or conducting elections (however, our responsibilities are different with regard to referendums).

1.4 The Commission has a statutory duty to report on all major elections – and may also report on other elections if asked to do so. Since our establishment in 2000, we have reported on the 2001 general election, the 2003 Scottish Parliamentary and local government elections, the 2003 Welsh Assembly and Northern Ireland Assembly elections, the 2004 European Parliamentary elections, and local elections in Wales. These reports are all available on our website.

1.5 In addition to reviewing the administration of particular elections, past reports have also taken the opportunity to comment on issues such as turnout, campaigns undertaken by political parties, and the media coverage they received. Such analysis is consistent with our remit to keep under review the law in relation to elections and to promote public awareness of electoral systems and related matters. We have also reported on spending by parties, candidates and third parties, and published full records of election results.

Reporting on the 2005 UK Parliamentary general election

1.6 In reporting on the 2005 general election, we have adopted a thematic approach. This included our statutory report on the administration of the election in Securing the vote (May 2005) which was a major review of the conduct of the election with recommendations for reform, especially in relation to postal voting. Subsequently, we published a series of reports on specific aspects of the election:

- Election 2005: turnout (October 2005)
- Election 2005: Northern Ireland (December 2005) and
- Election 2005: engaging the public in Great Britain (December 2005)

Election 2005: campaign spending (March 2006) is the final report in this series.

1.7 This report provides an account of the campaign spending by those who participated in the election. It is divided into three main sections. The first two deal with spending by political parties and third parties and the third section focuses on candidates' spending. The report's conclusion explains the future programme of work the Commission will undertake to help improve adherence to the law by those regulated by PPERA and other relevant legislation.

1.8 This report has been informed by a number of sources, which include the political parties' campaign expenditure returns to the Commission; recognised third parties' controlled expenditure returns to the Commission; candidates' election expenses returns; compliance reviews of the returns; and previous reports published by the Commission relating to campaign spending and policy reviews.

1.9 The Commission carries out compliance checks on all statutory returns submitted by political parties and third parties. These sometimes result in adjustments to the originally reported figures which are reflected in the numbers reported in this volume. However, due to the number of candidates standing for election, we can only carry out detailed checks on a sample of their returns. Therefore the numbers reported here in respect of candidates are based on the figures as reported and are not adjusted.

1.10 This report does not make recommendations and has been published as one part of a comprehensive account of the 2005 general election. The Commission has previously made a series of recommendations for changes to electoral legislation in Voting for change (2003), which reiterated a number of recommendations relating to electoral registration and postal voting, in Delivering democracy? (2004) and Securing the vote (2005). The Commission is pleased that the Government has taken many of these recommendations forward in its Electoral Administration Bill and the Scottish Executive in its Local Electoral Administration and Registration Services Bill.

The role of the Electoral Commission

1.11 PPERA gives the Commission a duty of monitoring compliance with:

- Parts V and VI of the Act which deal with campaign spending by registered political parties and third parties and
- the restrictions and other requirements imposed by relevant enactments in respect of candidates' election expenses and donations

1.12 The 2001 general election was the first election at which the Commission undertook the role of monitoring compliance with Parts V and VI of PPERA, as these came into effect on 16 February 2001. Accordingly, we reported on campaign spending by political parties and third parties in our 2001 general election report. The Commission's role of monitoring compliance with the controls on candidates' spending and donations to candidates came into effect on 1 July 2001. Since that time, the Commission has monitored candidates' compliance with the law.

1.13 At first, the Commission's focus in this area of its work was primarily concerned with raising awareness among political parties, third parties and candidates, to ensure they fully understood the legislative requirements to which they were newly required to adhere. However, now that the PPERA framework has been in operation for a number of years, we are focussed on working with regulated stakeholders to further improve their ability to meet legal requirements.

2 Campaign spending by political parties

The 2005 general election was contested by 119 political parties who were required to report on their spending. The total spending by political parties was over £42 million, of which 84% was spent by the Labour and Conservative parties.

Regulatory controls on political parties

2.1 The Commission is required to maintain separate registers of political parties, one for Great Britain and one for Northern Ireland. Only candidates nominated by registered parties can use a description on the ballot paper. Political parties are subject to a number of controls specified in PPERA which include limits on the amount they can spend at a regulated election and from whom they can accept donations. Spending by individual candidates including independent candidates is reported in Chapter 4.

Registration

2.2 The deadline for registration as a political party to contest the 2005 general election was the last date for the notice of the election, which was 14 April 2005. On this date, there were a record number of 373 political parties registered with the Commission: 318 parties on the Great Britain register and 55 parties on the Northern Ireland register. By comparison, at the 2001 general election, a total of 179 parties were registered: 148 on the Great Britain register and 31 on the Northern Ireland register. In 2001, 25 new parties registered between 30 April and 17 May, the last date for registration in advance of that year's general election. In 2005, 24 parties registered in the final two weeks before the deadline.

Changes to controls

2.3 Two important differences affected the regulated period at the 2005 general election as compared with the 2001 election. First, the 2005 election was the first time that there was a 365-day regulated period for a general election. The PPERA controls on political party campaigning came into force on 16 February 2001. As a result, the regulated period for the 2001 general election ran from 16 February to 7 June (111 days). Due to the shorter regulated period, spending limits were correspondingly lower in 2001 than in 2005.

2.4 Second, as the 2004 European Parliamentary elections took place on 10 June 2004, within a 365-day period of the 2005 general election, a combined regulated period applied for the 26 parties that had contested both the 2004 European Parliamentary elections and the 2005 general election. The combined regulated period ran from 11 February 2004 to 5 May 2005 and parties were required to report their total campaign spending during this period. For the 93 parties contesting the 2005 general election that had not contested the 2004 European elections, the regulated period ran from 6 May 2004 to 5 May 2005.

2.5 The shorter regulated period and lower spending limits in 2001 and combined regulated period in 2005 make comparisons between party campaign spending in 2001 and 2005 more difficult. Therefore it is important that all such comparisons in this chapter should be considered in light of these differences.

Political party spending

2.6 All political parties that put forward candidates at a general election must submit a campaign expenditure return within three months of the election if their campaign spending was £250,000 or less, or within six months if their spending was over £250,000. At the 2005 general election, 119 political parties had candidates contesting the election. These parties were required to submit returns. A total of 118 parties submitted the required returns.

2.7 The remaining party, which fielded only one candidate and has since given the Commission notice of its intention to deregister, gave the Commission verbal assurance that it had not spent any money on party campaigning. In light of the party's circumstances, we did not feel it would be in the public interest to pursue the non-submission.

2.8 Political parties are subject to limits on how much they can spend in each area of the UK at a general election. For Northern Ireland parties, the limit is £30,000 multiplied by the number of constituencies contested by the party in Northern Ireland. For Great Britain parties, the limit in each area is £30,000 multiplied by the number of constituencies contested by the party in that area of Great Britain or the amount given in Table 1, whichever is greater.

Table 1: Minimum spending limits in areas of Great Britain*

Area	Minimum limit (£)
England	810,000
Scotland	120,000
Wales	60,000

Note: * Party must contest at least one seat in the area to qualify for the minimum limit.

2.9 The total general election limit for a Northern Ireland party contesting all seats was £540,000. The total general election limit for a Great Britain party contesting all seats was £18,840,000. The number of candidates put forward by each party is given in Appendix B.

Categorising party and candidates expenses

2.10 In defining party campaign spending, PPERA specifies that any spending reported in a candidate's return should be excluded from the party's return.² The Commission recognises that there is often a fine line between party and candidates' spending. Our guidance states that 'any material that is promoting the party as a whole' should be construed as party campaign spending while 'any material that promotes a candidate or group of candidates' should be construed as candidates' expenses.³

2.11 If a party is fielding only one candidate, the Commission's guidance recommends that any spending by the party should be treated as candidate's expenses, unless it was clearly party campaign spending, for example a party manifesto.

Analysis of returns

2.12 Although 119 parties contested the election, only 40 spent money on party campaigning. In reviewing parties' returns, we identified that some erroneously reported candidates' spending as party spending. A list of parties erroneously reporting spending can be found in Table A2.

2.13 In 2001, 36 of the 80 parties that contested the election reported to the Commission that they had incurred campaign expenditure.

² Section 72(7) of PPERA.

³ Campaign expenditure: guidance for political parties (2004) The Electoral Commission.

Details of the campaign spending reported to the Commission by each party that contested the 2005 general election are contained in Appendix B.

2.14 Parties are subject to limits on their spending in each area of Great Britain and in Northern Ireland. None of the parties exceeded the spending limits at the 2005 election.

2.15 Table 2 (see overleaf) shows campaign spending by the 11 parties that had at least one candidate elected to the UK Parliament.

2.16 Figures 1–4 (see pages 15–16) compare spending for the 2001 and 2005 general elections respectively in England, Scotland, Wales, and Northern Ireland for parties with elected MPs. The 2001 figures have not been adjusted for inflation.

2.17 Table 3 (see pages 18–19) provides the percentage breakdown of spending by the 11 parties that had at least one candidate elected at the 2005 general election. The categories of expenditure are as set out in Schedule 8 to PPERA. Actual spending figures are provided in the returns in Appendix B.

Spending in different areas of the UK

2.18 Parties are required to apportion and report their spending by area across the UK. Table 4 (see page 18) compares party spending in 2001 and 2005 in each area of the UK.⁴ The 2001 figures have not been adjusted for inflation.

2.19 Tables 5–8 (see pages 20–22) show the amount spent respectively in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland by each of the parties contesting seats in the respective area that incurred campaign spending there.

⁴ See paragraph 2.5 for information on comparisons between 2001 and 2005 general elections.

Issues

2.20 The 2005 general election resulted in the largest number of political parties reporting campaign spending since PPERA was introduced in 2001; 78 parties submitted returns for the first time although many of these returns indicated nil spending. The Commission has reviewed all the returns received to monitor compliance with the legislation. In general, there was an improved level of understanding of the PPERA reporting requirements for those parties that had run campaigns in previous regulated elections.

May have rounding errors if the original figures were submitted in pounds and pence.

Note: Two parties that won seats at the 2005 election in England do not appear: Respect – The Unity Coalition was formed between the 2001 and 2005 elections and Independent Kidderminster Hospital and Health Concern did not report any party spending at the 2001 election, though its candidate reported spending of £4,872.

As many of the parties had contested previous elections and reported spending under PPERA rules, the standard of returns has improved since 2001, with fewer mistakes made by parties in completing the forms. Accordingly, fewer changes needed to be made to the reported figures following the Commission's compliance checks.

2.21 In several cases, as a result of our reviews, adjustments have been made to reported expenditure figures (as indicated in Appendix B). Generally, the amendments have resulted in a lower total than that originally reported to the Commission, mainly due to duplications and/or incorrect calculations. In the case of the D.U.P., the adjusted total is £16,000 higher than that originally reported, although it is well within the permitted limit. The Socialist Labour Party did not categorise their expenditure in their original return; the adjusted figures provide this detail without changing the overall total reported expenditure.

2.22 PPERA requires that parties spending over £250,000 during a combined regulated period⁵ must have their return independently audited, even if they did not spend in excess of £250,000 at any single election within the combined period.⁶ Four parties were subject to this requirement, because although they did not spend more than £250,000 for the 2005 general election, they exceeded the £250,000 combined reporting threshold for the combined period as a whole. These were:

- British National Party
- The Green Party
- Respect – The Unity Coalition and
- Scottish National Party

2.23 A number of compliance issues were identified during the Commission's review of all the returns received:

- confusion between what should be reported as party as opposed to candidates' spending, which in a number of cases resulted in double reporting of spending
- late submission of returns
- payment of late invoices: claims for payment received more than 21 days after the election can only be paid by court order
- return signed by the wrong officer and
- failure to submit receipts required with the return

2.24 To address these issues, the Commission is working with parties to ensure such breaches of legislation do not recur, as set out in Chapter 5. Where invoices were missing, these have been requested from the parties concerned and in most cases have been submitted.

2.25 The Commission regularly updates its interpretation of the application of legislation, in light of events and matters brought to its attention. During and immediately after the 2005 election, two such issues arose regarding donations. One related to the criteria for determining the permissibility of corporate donations, in particular the requirement that a company 'carries on business' in the UK.

⁵ See paragraph 2.4 for information about the combined regulated period.

⁶ A party only needs to get an independent audit of a campaign expenditure return when the total spending exceeds £250,000.

We are consulting political parties and reviewing the relevant case law in order to provide suitable guidance to assist those responsible for checking the permissibility of corporate donors.

2.26 The second issue concerned the status of loans as potential donations. Loans provided at a rate of interest below the commercial rate will accrue a notional donation⁷ to the party from the lender. If the difference between the interest charged and the commercial interest that would accrue exceeds £200, the lender must be a permissible donor. If the notional donation element exceeds the reporting threshold,⁸ it must be reported to the Commission as a donation in the return for the quarter in which the threshold was exceeded.

⁷ Notional donations are when any goods, services, property or facilities are provided to a party free of charge or at a discount of more than 10% of the commercial rate, for election purposes.

⁸ The reporting threshold for the national headquarters of a party is £5,000 while for the accounting unit of a party it is £1,000.

2.27 Loans that are later converted into donations should be reported to the Commission if they exceed the reporting threshold. They must be reported in the donation return for the quarter in which the loan was converted to a donation. All loans must be reported in the party's annual Statement of Account, which is reviewed and published by the Commission. However, if a party were accepting loans that it expected to be converted to donations in order to avoid reporting requirements, the Commission would consider this to be a breach of the spirit of the controls.

2.28 The Commission believes that in the interest of transparency the treatment of loans requires further review.

2.29 We undertake a range of standard checks to see whether a party has complied with the law in submitting its return. Where a specific issue about a return is brought to our attention we address it accordingly.

3 Controlled spending by third parties

Individuals and organisations other than political parties and candidates that wish to campaign at a regulated election are considered to be third parties. At the 2005 general election 24 third parties spent £1.7 million on their campaigns.

Regulatory controls on recognised third parties

3.1 PPERA established the category of ‘third party’ at an election. In this context, a third party is a body or person that campaigns on behalf of one or more registered political parties or a particular category of candidates, for example, those that hold or advocate a particular policy or opinion. Part VI of PPERA places various restrictions on third parties including dictating from whom they can accept donations and the amount they can spend on campaigning for the electoral success of registered parties or candidates.

Changes to controls

3.2 Similar to the changes to the regulation of political parties discussed in paragraph 2.3, two important differences affected the regulated period for third parties at the 2005 general election as compared with the 2001 election. First, the 2005 election was the first time that there was a 365-day regulated period for a general election. The PPERA controls on third party campaigning came into force on 16 February 2001. As a result, the regulated period for the 2001 general election ran from 16 February to 7 June (111 days). Due to the shorter regulated period, spending limits were correspondingly lower in 2001 than in 2005. This meant that third parties had to have systems in place to record spending incurred on election material before the election was announced on 5 April 2005.

3.3 Second, as the 2004 European Parliamentary elections took place on 10 June 2004, within a 365-day period of the 2005 general election, a combined regulated period applied for those third parties that had reported controlled expenditure to the Commission for the 2004 election. For these third parties, the regulated period ran from 11 February 2004 to 5 May 2005 and they were required to report their total controlled expenditure incurred during this period.

3.4 In practice this affected only three third parties:

- Searchlight Information Services Ltd
- UNISON – The Public Services Union and
- Unite Against Fascism

For all other recognised third parties, the regulated period ran from 6 May 2004 to 5 May 2005.

Registration

3.5 Third parties that intend to spend over £10,000 in England or over £5,000 in any of Scotland, Wales or Northern Ireland during a regulated period must submit a notification to the Commission to be included on the register of recognised third parties before spending over these amounts. Once registered, third parties are required to submit a controlled expenditure return to the Commission reporting what they spent during the election. To fund their campaign, third parties may only accept donations from permissible donors and they are required to report all donations received for this purpose to the Commission.

3.6 At the time of the 2005 general election, 26 recognised third parties were registered with the Commission. This represented a substantial increase over 2001 when 10 such third parties were on the register at the time of that year's general election.

Third party spending

3.7 The Commission received controlled expenditure returns from 25 recognised third parties, including one return that reported no spending. Alliance – The Alliance Party of Northern Ireland was also a recognised third party at the time of the 2005 general election, but was not required to submit a controlled expenditure return because they contested seats at the election as a registered political party and therefore submitted a campaign expenditure return.

Spending reported

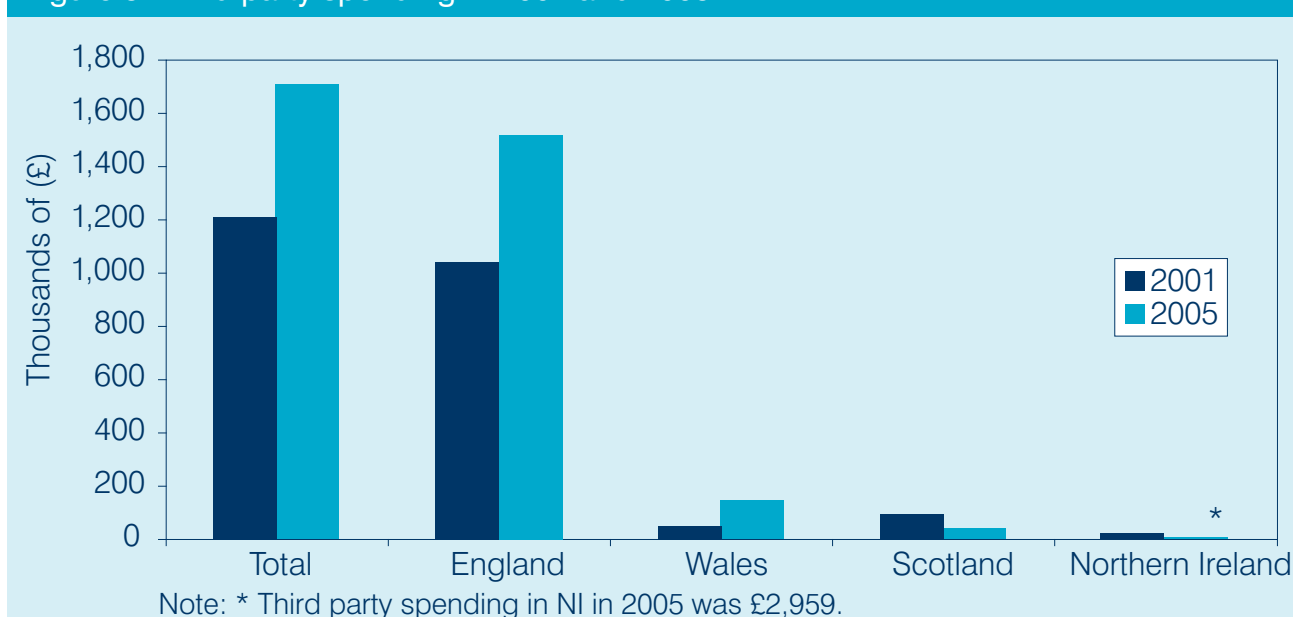

3.8 Spending reported by third parties is detailed in Appendix D. No third parties came close to their spending limit, which was almost £1 million.⁹ Controlled expenditure varied greatly, ranging from £225 to almost £700,000.

3.9 The spending by third parties in the UK as a whole and in each part of the UK in 2001 and 2005 is compared in Figure 5. Where returns were submitted in respect of the combined regulated period, only spending which relates to the 2005 election is included in the tables and figures in this section. The 2001 figures are not adjusted for inflation.

3.10 It should be noted that the regulated period for the general election was longer in 2005 (365 days), as compared with 2001 (111 days). Additionally, the three third parties that produced election material for the 2004 European Parliamentary elections were operating under a combined regulated period as described above.

⁹ Third parties that had campaigned at the 2004 European Parliamentary elections were subject to a combined limit of almost £1.2 million.

3.11 Table 9 (overleaf) shows the apportionment of third parties' spending across the UK. Some figures in the table may be subject to rounding errors where the original numbers were reported to the Commission in exact amounts (pounds and pence).

3.12 All 24 registered third parties that reported controlled expenditure spent money in England, amounting to 89% of total third party spending at the election. In other areas of the UK, 14 third parties spent money, with spending in Scotland making up just over 8% of the total, spending in Wales 2% and spending in Northern Ireland less than 1%.

3.13 Unlike political parties, registered third parties are not required to provide a breakdown of the spending they incur by category.

However, from our analysis of the invoices submitted with the returns, the most common category of spending related to the design, printing and distribution of leaflets.

3.14 A total of £36,405 notional expenditure¹⁰ was incurred by third parties, and £23,519 was also reported as unpaid claims. Should the third parties wish to pay these claims after the deadline for payment passed (16 June 2005), they must obtain a court order to do so. Unpaid claims are included in the total of reported expenditure in Table 9. No disputed claims were reported to the Commission.

¹⁰ See footnote 7 for definition.

Issues

3.15 The 2005 election resulted in the largest number of third party returns for a relevant election since PPERA was introduced in 2001, with 18 third parties submitting returns for the first time. The Commission's Election 2001 Campaign spending report had noted that there was evidence to suggest spending that exceeded the limits by unregistered third parties. The increase in the number of third parties registered at the 2005 general election suggests that potential third parties had a better understanding of the limits imposed by PPERA.

3.16 There was however, one instance at the 2005 general election where a third party was thought to have spent in excess of the limit for an unregistered third party. The Commission was made aware that, during the regulated period, a campaign group, Concerned Citizens for a Shared Future, may have issued election material which exceeded the limit for a non-recognised third party. The Commission is still reviewing this issue and will take appropriate action once its review has been completed.

3.17 UNISON reported spending that exceeded the limit in Scotland. Separate limits exist on spending in different areas of the UK. The overspend represented less than 1% of UNISON's total spending during the combined regulated period. This is the first time since the introduction of PPERA that a spending breach has occurred. The Commission is working closely with UNISON to understand how the limit came to be exceeded and what steps will be taken to ensure it does not recur.

3.18 Two third parties, the G.M.B. and Patrick Evershed, spent more than the limit for an unregistered third party (see paragraph 3.5) before the time that they registered with the Commission. These incidences and the one referred to in paragraph 3.16 highlight the need for greater awareness by third parties about the duties on them in relation to campaigning at a regulated election.

3.19 A number of further issues were identified during the Commission's review of the returns:

- late submission of returns: 12 third parties submitted returns after the due deadline
- late payment of invoices: several third parties did not pay invoices within the 42-day period required by legislation
- lack of invoices submitted with return (one third party) and
- inclusion of items not covered under the definition of controlled expenditure, particularly staff costs

3.20 The Commission is working together with third parties to address these issues and will provide continued support to improve their understanding of the controls and compliance with the legal requirements, as set out in Chapter 5.

4 Spending by candidates

A total of 3,554 candidates contested the 2005 general election. The Commission received returns from 3,504 of these candidates which reported candidates' spending of over £14 million.

Changes to controls

4.1 Candidates' expenses and donations are regulated under the Representation of the People Act 1983 (RPA) as amended by PPERA. The RPA sets out the legislation for candidates' and agents' spending, while the amendments made by PPERA bring requirements for candidates into line with legislation for registered political parties.

4.2 While most of the provisions brought in by PPERA were in place before the 2001 general election, a number of new controls on candidates were introduced on 1 July 2001. These related to donations, notional income and expenditure and the regulated period.

Donations

4.3 Controls on donations to candidates were introduced by PPERA, which require that all donations over £50 must originate from a permissible source. Candidates and election agents must report all donations of more than £50 accepted from a permissible source in the candidate's election expenses return. In addition, any donations from impermissible or unidentified donors should also be returned to the donor and reported in the return.

Notional income and expenditure

4.4 Notional expenditure is incurred when any goods, services, property or facilities are provided to a candidate, or their election agent, free of charge or at a discount of more than 10% of the commercial rate, for the purpose of the candidate's election. The value of notional expenditure is the difference between the commercial cost of an item and what the candidate, or election agent, actually paid for it.

Table 10: Candidates' expenses limits

Constituency type	2001 limit	2005 revised limit
County	£5,483 plus 6.2p per elector	£7,150 plus 7p per elector
Borough/burgh	£5,483 plus 4.6p per elector	£7,150 plus 5p per elector

4.5 With the introduction of PPERA controls on notional expenditure¹¹ candidates are now required to report any costs met by a donor towards their overall expense limit as notional expenditure in their expenses return, if the value exceeds £50. The provision of any services or staff for the candidate's campaign should also be reported as notional expenditure, if valued at more than £50, as well as being reported in the donations section of the return as a non-cash donation. The provision by an individual of services free of charge and in their own time does not constitute a donation.

Change to regulated period

4.6 Amendments made by PPERA to the RPA clarified the period during which candidates' spending is regulated. For elections to the UK Parliament, the period runs from the dissolution of Parliament, 11 April in 2005, to the date of the poll, 5 May in 2005, so long as the individual had either declared themselves or been declared a candidate by the date of dissolution. In other cases, the regulated period begins on the date the individual declared themselves or was declared a candidate and runs to the date of the election.

4.7 Any spending or donations received during this regulated period and relating to a candidate's election campaign must be reported in their election expenses return. Spending before the start of the regulated period on goods or services used during the regulated period also must be reported, as well as any donations received to meet the cost of election spending.

Expense limits

4.8 On 4 March 2005, an Order¹² was laid to implement changes to candidates' expense limits, following recommendations made by the Commission. The Order increased spending limits for a UK Parliamentary general election for both county and borough/burgh constituencies. Table 10 provides details of the previous and revised limits.

4.9 These revised limits took into consideration a number of issues since the time that the previous amounts were set in 2001, including the introduction of the requirement to report notional expenditure, the change to the regulated period¹³ and inflation.

Candidates' expenses

Personal expenses

4.10 Personal expenses are expenses that have been incurred on account of or incidental to the ¹² Statutory Instrument 2005 No. 269.

¹³ Changes to the definition of election expenses and the regulated period are in Sections 90A–90C of the RPA.

election campaign, such as travel expenses incurred on journeys to and from the constituency a candidate is contesting, and the cost of staying in hotels or elsewhere during the election campaign.

4.11 Personal expenses do not count towards the candidates' statutory spending limits. The limit available to candidates at the 2005 general election was £600¹⁴ and the candidate is permitted to incur and pay any expenses up to this limit. Any personal expenses over this amount can only be incurred and paid by the candidate's agent.

Analysis of returns

4.12 A total of 3,554 candidates contested seats at the 2005 general election. This was 235 more than contested the 2001 general election. The Commission received returns from 3,504 candidates (99%) and the figures in this section are based on 3,501 of those returns.

4.13 Table 11 (see overleaf) shows the amount spent by candidates from 1945 to 2005. In reading this table, it should be remembered that the legal maximum spending for candidates has steadily risen during this period. The figures have not been adjusted for inflation.

4.14 Table 12 (see overleaf) shows the amount of candidates' reported spending at the 2005 general election, broken down by category.

4.15 Table 13 (see pages 34–35) shows candidates' reported spending broken down by party for parties with 10 or more candidates nominated.

¹⁴ Set by Section 74(3) of the RPA 1983 as amended by Section 14(2) of the RPA 1985.

4.16 Figure 6 (see page 33) compares candidates' reported spending as percentages of the limits for all candidates standing at the election and for those elected.

Issues

South Staffordshire – delay of poll

4.17 Due to the death of a candidate in the South Staffordshire constituency during the period between the close of nominations and the general election date of 5 May, it was necessary to delay the poll in that constituency until 23 June 2005.

4.18 There was some confusion over this occurrence. It was widely thought that the subsequent election was classified a by-election, but in fact it was technically a delay of the original poll. Therefore, expense limits for a by-election were not in force. Instead the law provided that the limit for candidates who were nominated for the original 5 May 2005 polling date was double the original limit, while the normal general election limit applied to any candidate who was nominated only for the 23 June polling date.¹⁵

Returns

4.19 The election in 2005 was the first general election for which the Commission had a role in monitoring candidates' compliance. Our work at other elections in the previous two years identified areas which we considered could give rise to material risks. As a result, the Commission's compliance team developed a new framework for assessing the compliance of candidates' expense returns to be applied for the first time at this election.

4.20 Direct comparisons of the outcomes of reviews of candidates' returns from previous years are harder to make, as different criteria have been used to assess them. There is, however, anecdotal evidence to support the view that candidates and their agents were more aware of the legislation and therefore levels of compliance appear to have been higher. For example, the Commission reviewed a sample of council candidates' returns for the English local elections in 2003; out of the sample, which represented 3,299 candidates, there were 189 candidates who failed to submit a return (6%); in 2005 this figure had dropped to 50 (1.4%).

4.21 Within six months of the 2005 general election the Commission received 99% of all candidates' returns. Following the submission of candidates' returns the Commission reviewed them and a number of common issues were identified:

- incomplete returns: 4% of all returns received were missing relevant pages particularly declaration forms
- inaccurate reporting of spending: some candidates' returns incorrectly categorised their spending and
- non-reporting of donations: particularly non-reporting of the source of notional expenditure

4.22 In relation to spending limits, we have identified a number of constituencies where the information provided by Returning Officers to candidates differed from the information provided to the Commission. The discrepancies related to information provided by Returning Officers about the size of the electorate or the type of constituency, which was used by candidates as a basis for calculating their spending limits. In several cases this resulted in the calculation of a candidate spending limit for the constituency which was higher than the limit provided to the Commission. A list of these constituencies can be found in Table A7. The Commission will be considering measures to help ensure that this does not recur at future elections, as discussed further in Chapter 5.

4.23 The Commission has identified one candidate, Kieran Deeny an independent candidate in West Tyrone, who reported expenditure in excess of the statutory limit. The overspend represented 12% of the available limit. The Commission will be following this matter up.

4.24 The Commission failed to receive returns of expenses from 50 candidates who are listed in Table A5. In all cases we have contacted the agents of candidates who failed to submit a return to find out the reasons for non-submission. The most common reason given was the belief that the candidate was not required to complete a return in cases where there was very little or no election spending. This indicates a gap in the knowledge of some candidates and agents. Other reasons included the assertion that the return had been posted but subsequently not delivered, as well as the death of one candidate.

4.25 The non-submissions were predominately from independent candidates and candidates representing smaller parties. Many of them were standing for the first time and none were an elected candidate or a candidate who received a high proportion of votes. As such the Commission has determined that it is not in the public interest to pursue criminal prosecution of the candidates and agents involved.

5 Conclusion

Our work supporting parties and agents has led to a step improvement in their understanding of spending rules and the quality and quantity of information provided to us. We also are pleased that individual candidates appear to have an improved understanding of their responsibilities, as demonstrated by the very high levels of compliance.

Supporting parties and agents prior to the UK Parliamentary general election

5.1 In advance of the general election, the Commission produced 4,500 copies of a CD-Rom containing guidance for those involved in the election. It was distributed to political parties, third parties, candidates, agents and Returning Officers. Following feedback from stakeholders on our 2004 European Parliamentary and local government elections CD-Rom, the 2005 version was enhanced to make it more user-friendly. The Commission also ran compliance training sessions for parties and candidates frequently between January and April 2005.

Monitoring compliance

5.2 One of our main concerns regarding compliance with the relevant aspects of PPERA was the late submission of expenditure returns by political parties and third parties. Only 44% of political parties and third party returns were received by their respective statutory deadlines; however, the vast majority (81%) were received within one month of the appropriate date. The Commission has contacted those concerned to seek an explanation for the late submission. The most common explanation was a lack of awareness of the reporting requirements; the Commission will specifically address this issue through continued training and guidance and enhance our system of issuing reminders to those campaigning at future elections.

5.3 One of the challenges the Commission has in securing compliance with the law is that the current penalty regime provides disproportionate remedies for breaches of the law. We have previously expressed our view to Government that more effective mechanisms should be developed in the context of a revised penalty scheme.¹⁶

Securing future compliance

5.4 To achieve one of our key objectives of ensuring transparency in the finances of political parties, third parties and candidates, we are committed to securing regulated stakeholders' compliance with the law. We are grateful to those interested parties – particularly the media and political parties – who bring issues to our attention. We value this approach and regard it as essential to ensuring transparency and accountability in the financial aspects of elections.

5.5 In developing our compliance function, we shall be implementing a more risk based approach to the compliance review process, reducing the administrative burden placed on those regulated by the law, providing more individual advice to parties, candidates and agents and where necessary working with the electoral community to develop new forms and guidance.

5.6 We have already adopted this approach in developing our general advice and guidance to parties and candidates to help improve knowledge of and compliance with PPERA and the RPA. In September 2005, we sought feedback on our provision of advice and guidance by circulating a questionnaire to political parties, candidates, agents, third parties and Returning Officers. The results of the questionnaire indicated there was a broadly positive view of the Commission's advice and guidance, although some stakeholders made suggestions for improvement, which will be taken into account in the development of future material.

5.7 For the 2006 English local elections, we have provided a single guidance document for candidates and agents that combines both the financial and non-financial aspects of standing as a candidate. In addition, there is a dedicated section on our website with all relevant guidance and forms for parties, candidates and agents contesting the 2006 local elections. We hope that this improved material will assist in addressing some of the issues raised during the 2005 general election.

5.8 In several cases, we have reached agreement with political parties to put into operation year-long compliance development programmes, which we will monitor to help secure compliance with the law. These programmes will initially involve Commission staff reviewing parties' corporate governance frameworks for complying with PPERA and reporting on our findings. During the year we will monitor the action taken by the parties to implement the recommendations we have made to ensure that systems are enhanced to secure future compliance.

5.9 We have identified a recurring problem for candidates who need to know their spending limit from the outset. Returning Officers are responsible for providing candidates with the information necessary to calculate their spending limits. In some cases there were discrepancies in the information given to candidates by Returning Officers about the size of the electorate and the type of constituency. In these cases, all candidates were operating from the same limit and were subject to the same rules, which allowed for even-handedness even where the actual limit may have been exceeded. Nevertheless, we intend to work together with Returning Officers to improve the accuracy of information given to candidates.

¹⁶ Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act 2000: Recommendations for change (June 2003)

5.10 Finally, as a result of the Electoral Administration Bill, which is expected to receive Royal Assent in summer 2006, certain changes will come into force regarding the regulation of parties and candidates. We shall be working with those affected by the changes to make sure they are aware of any new requirements on them and able to comply with the new regulations by the time they come into effect. To this end we hope to update our registrations database to cope with the new requirements and make the website more user-friendly. We will also be revising our guidance documents, holding training sessions and working closely with parties, candidates and agents.

Appendix B

Political parties' campaign expenditure returns

Items to be included in each party's return of campaign expenditure

Parties were required to report each individual item of spending incurred by the party during the regulated period. For political parties that contested both the June 2004 European Parliamentary elections and the 2005 general election, there was a combined regulated period for the two elections, which ran from 11 February 2004 to 5 May 2005. For all other parties who contested the 2005 general election, the regulated period ran from 6 May 2004 to 5 May 2005.

For each payment made parties were requested to supply details of:

- the name and address of the supplier
- the date the expense was incurred
- the date of claim for payment
- the date payment was made
- the amount of the item of expenditure and
- the category of spending (A-I) to which the payment could be attributed (see below)

All reported payments of more than £200 were required to be supported by a receipt or invoice.

In respect of any items of notional expenditure incurred parties were requested to provide the following information:

- the name and address of the supplier
- the nature of the expense incurred
- the period/date when the expense was incurred and
- the value of the item of notional expenditure

Instead of an invoice or receipt, a declaration of value by the responsible party officer was required for items of notional expenditure of more than £200.

Returns also required that the following details in respect of any unpaid or disputed claims for payment were provided:

- the name and address of the supplier
- the amount of the claim
- the date the expense was incurred and the invoice received (unpaid claims) or
- the date the disputed claim was said to have been incurred and the invoice received (disputed claims) and
- any extra information, such as the reason the claim has not been paid, or the grounds for dispute with the supplier

For every individual item of spending reported, actual notional, unpaid or disputed, parties were required to specify which category of spending the item fell into. The categories parties could use were as follows:

- A: party political broadcasts
- B: advertising
- C: unsolicited material
- D: manifestos and other documents
- E: market research
- F: press conferences and dealings with the media
- G: transport
- H: rallies and other events and
- I: overheads and general administration

Additionally, parties were required to complete a summary table specifying the total amount of spending incurred in each of the categories listed above, and in respect of:

- actual payments made
- notional expenditure incurred
- unpaid claims and
- disputed claims

Failure to submit a return

The St Albans Party (Great Britain register) contested the general election but failed to submit a written return of election expenses.

Parties submitting a nil campaign expenditure return

Table A1 (see pages 46–47) lists the parties on the Great Britain register which contested the general election but did not incur any party campaign spending and shows the number of candidates each party nominated to contest the general election.

Socialist Environmental Alliance (Northern Ireland register) put forward one candidate at the general election but did not incur any party campaign spending.

Parties erroneously reporting spending

Table A2 lists the parties on the Great Britain register which reported only non-reportable spending and which should have submitted a nil return. The table shows how many candidates each party had and how much spending they had originally reported.

No parties on the Northern Ireland register that ought to have submitted a nil return reported spending.

Parliamentary general election
(Table A3)

Some returns were amended, in agreement with the party, following compliance checks. In these cases, the original figures submitted to the Commission are shown in light blue and a note to explain the changes is provided in the table. Some rounding errors may occur where reported figures were originally in pounds and pence.

Third parties' controlled expenditure returns

Items to be included in each recognised third party's return of controlled expenditure

Third parties were required to report each individual item of controlled expenditure incurred during the period in which the organisation or individual was a recognised third party as it coincided with the regulated period.

For each payment made recognised third parties were required to provide details of:

- the name and address of the supplier
- the date the expense was incurred
- the date of claim for payment
- the date payment was made and
- the amount of the item of expenditure

All reported payments of more than £200 were required to be supported by a receipt or invoice.

In respect of any items of notional expenditure incurred, recognised third parties were requested to provide the following information:

- the name and address of the supplier
- the nature of the expense incurred
- the period/date when the expense was incurred and
- the value of the item of notional expenditure

Instead of an invoice or receipt, a declaration of value by the responsible officer was required for items of notional expenditure of more than £200.

Returns also required that following details in respect of any unpaid or disputed claims for payment were provided:

- the name and address of the supplier
- the amount of the claim
- the date the expense was incurred and the invoice received (unpaid claims) or
- the date the disputed claim was said to have been incurred and the invoice received (disputed claims) and
- any extra information, such as the reason the claim has not been paid, or the grounds for dispute with the supplier

Additionally recognised third parties were required to submit the total values of:

- actual payments made
- notional expenditure incurred
- unpaid claims
- disputed claims and
- the amount of controlled expenditure incurred during the regulated period before becoming a recognised third party

During the regulated period recognised third parties were subject to controls on donations, similar to those provisions that control donations to political parties. As part of its return to the Commission, each recognised third party had to provide information about the donations received. This information does not form part of this report but is available on the Commission's website.

Recognised third party submitting a return of nil controlled expenditure

The Musicians' Union submitted a return that reported that they had not spent any money during the regulated period on items of controlled expenditure.

Returns 41–64: controlled expenditure by recognised third parties (Table A4)

Some returns were amended, in agreement with the party, following compliance checks. In these cases, the original figures submitted to the Commission are shown in light blue and a note to explain the changes is provided in the table. Some rounding errors may occur where reported figures were originally in pounds and pence.

Appendix E

Candidates' election expenses at the 2005 UK Parliamentary general election

Failure to submit returns as to candidates' election expenses

Table A5 (see pages 86–87) lists the candidates who were reported to the Commission as having failed to submit a return as to their election spending.

Candidates submitting returns late

Candidates' expenses returns were due on 9 or 10 June 2005.¹⁷ In order to meet its production deadline, the Commission sent out a letter to all agents whose candidates had not submitted their returns asking that any returns be sent to the Commission before 15 December 2005. The candidates listed in Table A6 (see page 87) submitted returns after the extended deadline and their returns are not included in the analysis in this volume.

Constituencies where inconsistent information has been supplied about the statutory limit

The constituencies listed in Table A7 (see page 87) were those identified during our review of candidates' returns where there were discrepancies between the information provided by Returning Officers to candidates and to the Commission in relation to the spending limit.

Candidates' returns

Table A8 (see pages 88–399) shows candidates' reported election expenses at the 2005 general election.

Explanatory notes and definitions

Name of constituency

Constituencies are listed in alphabetical order. In most cases, compass points (e.g. North or East) follow the substantive name, although constituencies in Northern Ireland are generally listed by compass point.

Type of constituency

The type of constituency, borough/burgh or county, is indicated after the constituency name because the type of constituency governs the formula to be used in determining the legal maximum for a candidate's expenses.

Party

The party affiliation of a candidate. Candidates may only include a description in their nomination papers and on the ballot paper if it has been authorised by a registered political party. All unaffiliated candidates must either use the label 'Independent' with no further description or have no description on the ballot paper at all. As candidates are not required to use the registered name of their party, where the description on the ballot paper differs substantially from the party name, the description is given as a footnote.

¹⁷ The deadline is dependent on when the results are announced.

Some party names are abbreviated as follows:

BNP – British National Party

C28 – Clause 28 Children’s Protection Christian Democrats

CLBH – The Community (London Borough of Hownslow)

DSA – Democratic Socialist Alliance – People Before Profit

OMRLP – The Official Monster Raving Loony Party

PART – Personality AND Rational Thinking? Yes! Party

SBNB – Save Bristol North Baths Party

SNP – Scottish National Party

SOS – S O S! Voters Against Overdevelopment of Northampton

TPC – The People’s Choice! Exclusively For All

UKCI – UK Community Issues Party

UKIP – United Kingdom Independence Party

VFY – Vote For Yourself Rainbow Dream Ticket

Statutory limit

In a number of constituencies, Returning Officers provided information to candidates which differed from that provided to the Commission in respect of spending limits, as detailed in paragraph 4.22. In these cases, the limit used by candidates to plan their campaign spending is shown in brackets after the confirmed limit, where this information is known to the Commission.

Categories of election expenses

Details of election spending for each candidate are shown under the relevant categories specified by the form of return submitted by the candidate. Candidates’ personal expenses are subject to a separate limit of £600 and should not be included in the total expenses declared.

All figures within these tables are as reported within the candidates’ election expenses returns. No amendments or corrections have been made to the reported figures.

Conventions used in tables

A hyphen (-) is used to denote nil, or where no figure has been reported under the category of spending.
