Family of murdered man renew appeal

The family of a man murdered ten years ago today has renewed an appeal for information about his murder.

Father-of-one, Adrian Lamph, was shot by a loyalist gunman at Fair Green in Portadown on April 21, 1998.

His family say they are still devastated by his death and desperately want justice for Adrian who was 29-years-old.

One woman was charged with assisting offenders and is currently serving a prison sentence. But Mr Lamph's killer has not been caught.
