Post-mortem due on Quinn body

Probe into Quinn murder

A post-mortem examination is due to resume on the body of the murdered County Armagh man Paul Quinn.

Paul Quinn.

Mr Quinn, who was 21, died after being beaten by a gang of men wielding iron bars at a remote farm in County Monaghan at the weekend.

The Garda Commissioner Noel Conroy has briefed The First and Deputy First Ministers of Northern Ireland about the brutal murder.

Deputy First Minister Martin McGuinness says he is satisfied the killing was not political, and he is absolutely certain there was no republican involvement in it.

First Minister Ian Paisley has been in contact with British Prime Minister Gordon Brown, asking for his support should there be any political ramifications further down the line.

Paul Quinn`s family believe republicans were involved in his death.
