Twenty four gardai to be called to give evidence in Omagh bomb case

Friday, February 15, 2008

A judge in Belfast has said twenty-four gardai are to be called to give evidence at the Omagh bombing civil compensation case.

Relatives of some of the victims are suing five men for compensation.

The relatives' case is that the bomb was devised, constructed and transported from south of the border for detonation in Omagh.

They believe Garda evidence is essential to win their multi-million pound case.

Mr Judge Morgan told the High Court in Belfast today a letter would be issued to the judicial authorities in Dublin requesting their help in securing evidence.
