By Staff reporter

The Bishop of Derry and Raphoe, The Right Rev Ken Good, has appealed to those with information in relation to the Omagh bombing in 1998 to pass it on the authorities.

In a statement, Bishop Good said he believes it isn't too much to expect that the conscience of someone who has vital information concerning what he described as "this tragic low point in our recent history".

"The anguish and confusion etched on the faces of victims' loved ones outside the Belfast Courthouse on Thursday were yet another vivid reminder of the awful human cost of the Omagh bombing. This appalling outrage was the single most destructive act of the Troubles, and the damage it inflicted on so many lives is incalculable," he said.

"I believe it is not too much to expect that the conscience of someone who has vital information concerning this tragic low point in our recent history, might be sufficiently weighed down by the enormity of the damage inflicted that they come forward and admit to what they know. They themselves know that, before God, this is now what they have to do," Bishop Good added.

"I would still appeal to anyone who has any information whatsoever, no matter how small, to do what is morally required of them and to make contact with the authorities. Even at such a late stage it will help the families of the Omagh bomb victims in their search for justice and truth, and this is the very least that they deserve."

Bishop Good concluded: "At this time of year we are reminded of the pain and suffering of all those who have lost loved ones or bear injury as a result of the Troubles. It is a pain that they endure daily, but must be particularly poignant at Christmas. As a community we stand in solidarity with those who have suffered so much, including the victims of the Omagh bombing. This Christmas season we bear them in our prayers and in our hearts."
