Killers face arrest for inquiry snub

Sunday, June 17, 2007

INLA killer John Kennaway, found dead in his Maghaberry prison cell last weekend, had told the Billy Wright Inquiry he would not be giving evidence.

Republican sources confirmed Kennaway, along with fellow INLA gunmen Christopher McWilliams and John Glennon, had decided not to appear before the inquiry later this year.

The INLA trio had initially said they would co-operate when the inquiry held its preliminary hearings in Belfast

Their decision not to testify makes it virtually certain the inquiry panel will invoke its full judicial powers compelling the two survivors - McWilliams and Glennon - to appear before them.

Republican sources confirmed last week neither would appear before the inquiry.

"It is sufficient to say they will not give evidence in public," said the source.

"The execution of Billy Wright was first and foremost an INLA operation.

"The methodology has been publicly documented by the INLA.

"It is ludicrous to suggest there was collusion with the British state."

If McWilliams and Glennon are subpoenaed and refuse to appear, then they will almost certainly be arrested and brought before the inquiry by the PSNI.

'Crip' McWilliams is currently living in the Newry area while John Glennon is understood to be living in north Belfast.

Both were released from prison in 2000 after serving less than two years of their life sentences for the killing of LVF leader Wright.
