BBC DOCUMENTARY CONFIRMS DUP POLICY

Speaking after the BBC Northern Ireland programme "Breakout" which was aired last night the DUP Chairman Lord Morrow of Clogher Valley said on behalf of the Party,

"The BBC Programme last evening vindicated the DUP's very public campaign that it would be unacceptable to have Sinn Fein in control of any element of policing and justice in Northern Ireland.

This programme has shown the wisdom of the DUP's triple-lock which will ensure that policing and justice will only be devolved when we believe the conditions are right. I believe there would be no public confidence for any Sinn Fein Minister to hold such sensitive powers such as policing and justice.

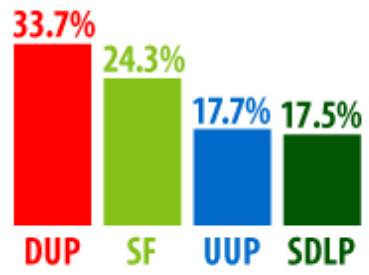

As for the unbalanced nature of the programme, this is a matter which we will address through the appropriate BBC channels."
