

Hume, John. (1982). 'This will destroy us all', Comments by John Hume following the Droppin Well bomb on 6 December 1982, (comments reported in newspaper article). The Irish Times, (8 December 1982): ... [23945] - [Comments]

Words of condemnation are futile in face of the cold-blooded planning and execution of this massslaughter which could only be described as evil in the extreme.

There can be no compromise with violence and murder. The whole population must disassociate themselves from any organisation which engages in killing and murder. Those who have no respect for the most fundamental human right of all, have no respect for any human rights and will destroy us all in the end.